Special Election Review: Australian Catholic University Academic Professor John Nethercote joins the panel. Nethercote talks about the hung parliament in the time of Menzies and Curtin. Nethercote says parliaments are meant to have hung parliaments to keep the government to account. Nethercote says it could be a good thing and could breath life into the House of Representatives. Discussion of who will provide the Speaker of the House.

Interviewee
Professor John Nethercote, Academic, Australian Catholic University