An invitation... to share your intercultural/interfaith Community Engagement Success

Do you have a story of a project that is happening now, where a partnership between a university and a local community is engaging groups across cultural or religious boundaries, in the pursuit of greater understanding, harmony and/or partnership for social change? Are you willing to share your knowledge, understandings and strategies with others? If so, we'd like to hear from you!

Australian Catholic University's Institute for Advancing Community Engagement is keen to share the good news of Community Engagement success stories in the area of interfaith/intercultural relations, with a wider network of people, universities and communities interested in pursuing community engagement and positive social change.

Short stories (about 1000 words) along with a few illustrative photos are welcome. The following headings should guide your report:

- The vision or goal of the project;
- The people, groups or communities involved;
- Main activities/undertakings of the initiative;
- What was – or is being – achieved (outcomes);
- Significant learnings emerging from the initiative;
- Prospects for sustainability of the project

Initially, submissions will allow us to identify and disseminate information about projects where interfaith/intercultural community engagement is working, with a view to establishing indicators of best practice. International discussion and reflection will foster further development of scholarship in the field of interfaith/intercultural community engagement.
