The antecedents of committee operations extend to a number of the committee's ongoing operations. These operations intersect with the practice of committees established prior to the period under consideration. A working relationship between the committee and the practice of committees established prior to the period under consideration is essential. It is not to be presumed that the practice of committees established prior to the period under consideration is not relevant. The Senate Procedure Committee's role in facilitating these interactions is critical. The Senate Procedure Committee's role is not to be underestimated. It is essential that the Senate Procedure Committee be properly resourced to perform this role.
