THE ENHANCING CATHOLIC SCHOOL IDENTITY (ECSI) PROJECT

The Enhancing Catholic School Identity (ECSI) Project features tools for enhancing Catholic identity in schools within an increasingly secular and pluralist global society.

The ECSI Project offers ongoing international research that gives staff, students and school communities a theological framework to better understand and clarify their Catholic identity and beliefs. The Project provides empirical and practical-theological instruments to measure a school's Catholicity, and in turn, confirm its future direction and practices.

THEOLOGICAL FOUNDATIONS FOR ENHANCING CATHOLIC SCHOOL IDENTITY

This suite of programs has been developed by the Faculty of Theology and Philosophy and the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (KUL), in conjunction with diocesan education partners. The THCT605: Enhancing Catholic Identity: Introducing the Leuven Project unit explores contemporary theology in the area of Catholic school identity, focusing on the theology, methodology and pedagogy of the ECSI Project.

It can be undertaken as part of a master's degree at ACU or as an interest-based professional learning activity.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

- Explain the theological foundations of the ECSI Project and the hermeneutic-communicative model.
- Demonstrate an understanding of the theoretical framework for the ECSI instruments.
- Interpret data generated by the ECSI instruments accurately and with insight with respect to personal areas for growth.

CONTENT

- views of the contemporary situation: detraditionalisation and pluralisation
- theology and tradition
- the nature and purposes of the Catholic School
- the hermeneutic-communicative model
- undertaking the ECSI survey
- theoretical and methodological frameworks for the ECSI instruments
- interpreting the ECSI survey results
- conditions for authentic dialogue
- theology as recontextualization
- enhancing Catholic School Identity: What do I do now?

ASSESSMENT

All assessment items relate to real-world situations and opportunities

Task 1: describe the theological background, aims and purposes of the ECSI Project; define its key terms; analyse data from the three ECSI scales; and discuss some of the challenges posed by the ECSI Project in the contemporary context. Where possible, participants are given the opportunity to work with their own school or diocesan data.

Introducing the Leuven Project

SCHEDULE

THIS UNIT IS OFFERED IN A BLENDED LEARNING MODE OVER THREE PHASES:

| Preparatory phase | Intensive residential phase | Consolidation phase |
|---|---|--|
| Participants will complete an online module and preliminary reading prior to attending the residential intensive. The completed material is not graded and is not accessible to teaching staff. It will form part of your preparation for assessment in the unit. | Participants engage in seminars and activities designed to enhance and deepen their engagement with the resources. Participants will develop skills to interpret the data generated by the ECSI instruments, and the ability to communicate their understanding in ways that support Catholic schools, educational systems, and communities in enhancing their Catholic identity. | Participants reflect critically on the personal challenges and implications of the ECSI Project. A webinar will support participants in the completion of the final assessment task. |

Task 2: reflect on their personal Catholic identity in light of the aims and purposes of the ECSI Project; identify ways in which their understanding of, and identification with, Catholic identity has changed as a result of their learning in the unit; and to reflect critically on the personal and professional implications and challenges of ECSI.

PARTICIPATION OPTIONS

Students wishing to undertake this unit may do so via one of the following modes:

Completing the unit for credit

1. Course admission and enrolment: This unit constitutes 10 credit points and is part of the Master of Theological Studies (MTS) (comprising 160 credit points) and the Master of Professional Studies in Theology (MPST) (comprising 120 credit points). Upon completion of this unit, enrolled students can undertake a second, more advanced unit on the ECSI Project.
2. Enrolment for credit towards another master's course: Students enrolled in other ACU programs (such as the Master of Religious Education or Master of Educational Leadership) should contact their course coordinator to apply for credit in those courses.
3. Individual unit enrolment: Participants may enrol in an individual unit and complete the assessment, without enrolling in a full course. Participants may seek to credit the unit to a relevant future course.

Completing the unit for general interest and professional learning

4. Audit: Participants are welcome to audit the unit and will not be required to complete the assessment. Please note, preference will be given to applicants seeking academic credit for the unit. The assessment tasks are designed to ensure that participants are able to read and interpret ECSI Project surveys with confidence

2020 UNIT OFFERING

Professional Term 5 (Ballarat)

This unit is offered in collaboration with the Catholic Education Office Ballarat. The residential component will take place in Ballarat from Monday June 26 to Friday 3 July 2020.

“I have only one regret, and it is that I have waited too long to immerse myself in ECSI. These few days...have been so uplifting and energising. The passion in the room is remarkable. I am thoroughly enjoying being present; a rare and valued privilege.”
