

LOOKING SLOWLY AT EARLY MODERN MAPS

A WORKSHOP FOR PHD STUDENTS WITH CHET VAN DUZER (UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER)

CONVENED BY KRISTIE P FLANNERY, KILLIAN QUIGLEY, AND SUSAN BROOMHALL, IHSS ACU

Maps are incredibly rich documents that only reveal some of their secrets after slow and deliberate study, and it is precisely this aspect of maps that we will explore in this two-hour workshop. Chet Van Duzer will analyze several early modern maps and provide examples of important characteristics of them that can only be appreciated and understood through slow looking. He will also supply advice on how to study maps slowly, and workshop participants will consult historic maps to begin to practice looking slowly at them, with plenty of time for examining the maps together and asking questions. The goal of the workshop is that participants will gain experience and tools for engaging more fully with maps in the future.
