

2016 Annual Sir Harold Wyndham Memorial Lecture

To See the Way: Toward a Positive Psychology of Indigenous Thriving

Australian Catholic University and the NSW Institute for Educational Research invite you to a lecture by

Professor Rhonda Craven

Director of the Institute for Positive Psychology and Education (IPPE)

There is an exciting new Indigenous world where Indigenous children, youth, and communities are not just succeeding but triumphing. However, little is known about how to identify, measure, and emulate these successes more broadly. This address introduces the new positive psychology of Indigenous thriving and the reciprocal research partnership model of Indigenous thriving utilising a research framework founded upon positive psychology principles and holistic Indigenous Australian worldviews. This model prioritises the voices and agency of Indigenous people, proposes that research be conducted in partnership as opposed to research being imposed on Indigenous communities, and focuses on Indigenous Australian strengths as opposed to deficit approaches.

Travelling to ACU North Sydney:

By Train - ACU Tenison Woods House is an easy walk from the North Sydney Station. To get there, walk through the Greenwood Plaza and up the escalators until you come out at the Miller Street and Pacific Highway intersection. From there continue up Pacific Highway and turn left on Charles Street then right into Napier Street.

By Bus - Many bus services to North Sydney stop at Blues Street; adjacent to the station, or on the Pacific Highway. We recommend that you use the Sydney Buses Trip Planner to plan your bus journey to the campus.

Parking in North Sydney: Guest parking is not available in Tenison Woods House. Paid off street and garage parking are located along Berry Street, Miller Street and the Pacific Highway.
