Annual Report 2013

Mission

The Mission of the Centre is to promote the values of compassion and fellowship, intellectual and professional excellence, and fairness and justice. Its primary focus is on the realisation of these values in the provision and allocation of health care. The Centre expresses this commitment through research, teaching and community engagement, as these are informed by the Catholic tradition.

Objectives

- ◆ To deepen and advance knowledge and understanding of the ethical standards relevant to human health and well-being, and in particular to clinical practice, medical research, business and management practices, and the allocation of healthcare resources.
- ◆ To offer courses in philosophical ethics and in the ethics of healthcare provision, medical research and healthcare resource allocation.
- ◆ To engage and where appropriate to collaborate with local, national and international bodies as they seek to respond to their intellectual and ethical needs.
- ◆ To foster collaboration on ethical matters between Australian Catholic University and St Vincents & Mater Health Sydney, St Vincent's Hospital Sydney, St Vincent's Private Hospital Sydney and Sacred Heart Hospice.

Functions

- Conducting and promoting research.
- Providing research training and supervision.
- Developing and teaching courses.
- Conducting reviews of professional practice.
- Providing an ethics consultation service.
- Participating in public discussions.

John Hubert Plunkett

Foreword from the University

As Executive Dean of the Faculty and, as Chair of the Management Committee for the Plunkett Centre for Ethics, I thank the Director of the Plunkett Centre for Ethics, Associate Professor and Reader Bernadette Tobin, for her unwavering dedication to and leadership of the Plunkett Centre for Ethics. I also thank Dr Stephen Matthews for his very valuable contributions to the work of the Centre.

2013 saw very significant developments in the University, under the banner of the University's Futures Project, with significant ramifications for all sections of the University, including the Plunkett Centre for Ethics. The Faculty Realignment Plan, which involved moving from six Faculties to four (Education & Arts, Health Sciences, Law & Business, and Theology & Philosophy), did not directly affect the Faculty of Theology and Philosophy or the Centre. The Research Intensification Plan, however, under the leadership of the Deputy-Vice-Chancellor (Research), Professor Wayne McKenna, effected a major change of strategy for the University, with ramifications for all Faculties and Centres. The various research centres in the Faculty of Theology and Philosophy (Centre for Early Christian Studies, Centre for Inter-religious Dialogue, Centre for the Philosophy and Phenomenology of Religion, and the Golding Centre for Women's History, Theology and Spirituality) were to be disbanded and a single larger multi-disciplinary institute for specialised advanced research was to be established in their place, taking effect on 1 January 2014. After considerable discussion, it was determined that the name of the Institute in the Faculty of Theology & Philosophy would be the Institute for Religion and Critical Inquiry.

The Institute's aim is to achieve a critical mass of researchers and research output and to raise the quality of research output, including competitive grant income. Thoroughly Catholic in spirit, the Institute will promote interdisciplinary and collaborative research in the areas of philosophy and theology and also of other disciplines that, in different ways, implicitly rely on philosophical and theological positions and which, in turn, enrich the traditional forms of philosophy and theology while challenging them to a new creativity of integration and extension. The programs or areas of focus, strength and investment in the Institute are as follows: Biblical Studies and Early Christianity; Catholic Thought and Practice, including Inter-religious Dialogue; Moral Philosophy and Applied Ethics; Philosophy and Phenomenology of Religion; and Religion and Society.

The earlier plan to establish a national centre for ethics is thus now superseded by the establishment of this institute for advanced research in the Faculty of Theology and Philosophy, with moral philosophy and applied ethics constituting one of the research strands therein. The original goal of focusing on applied ethics and its theoretical foundations, with its scope of activity to include (i) health care and bioethics, (ii) social ethics, based in Catholic social teaching, (iii) business and professional ethics, and (iv) perhaps, in the longer term, environmental ethics, remains unchanged.

Given that the Plunkett Centre for Ethics is established under a Memorandum of Understanding between Australian Catholic University and St Vincent's Health Australia

(Sydney), it will retain its identity and focus under the terms of the Memorandum and will not formally be part of the Institute. An important goal for the Institute and the moral philosophy and applied ethics program within it is, however, actively to promote strong collaborative and mutually supportive relationships with the Plunkett Centre for Ethics and also with the local diocesan-based Catholic ethics centres in Australia. We look forward now to progressing the Faculty's plans to develop strength and expertise in this very important area

Foreword from the Hospital

We very much value our collaboration with Australian Catholic University with respect to the Plunkett Centre for Ethics with its rich resource base and ability to respond to the needs of the Hospital. This is highlighted particularly in terms of having a 'consultation service' which is immediate and confidential, assisting healthcare professionals in meeting the challenges of providing effective, compassionate and efficient healthcare in the circumstances of the 21st Century where often the issues are very complex. Being able to 'tap in' to this expertise in ethical and moral review aspects in these circumstances is very important.

A number of sessions have been provided by the Plunkett Centre for our senior and middle level managers on the Code of Ethical Standards for Catholic Health and Aged Care Services in Australia. These sessions were particularly useful, not only for our managers at the clinical coalface, but also those in senior management positions in a Catholic healthcare environment where they are faced with issues on a regular basis that are rarely black or white. These sessions are a practical way to test the thought process necessary when addressing issues in relation to the Code.

The most recent lecture in the Annual Plunkett Lecture series was an absolute revelation for me. I confess to having been unaware of the amazing benefits of music therapy for people with severe cognitive impairment. Apart from being personally educative, Dr Steve Matthews' lecture made me think about how we could better integrate these therapies into patient care, enabling better access and making a profoundly positive impact on people's lives.

From the Director

The year 2013 was the first of the five further years of collaboration between St Vincent's Hospital in Sydney and Australian Catholic University with respect to the Plunkett Centre. In February, the academic staff of the Centre - Dr Steve Matthews and myself - were joined by Donna Sofinowski, our new Administrative Officer.

In 2013 Matthews taught the first cohort of students enrolled in the University's new Graduate Certificate in Philosophy (Health Care). This course is structured in such a way that students will be able to use it as a stepping stone towards a Graduate Diploma and Masters. This Graduate Certificate is offered to interested professionals in Melbourne, Sydney and Brisbane. In 2013 Tobin taught another cohort of students – mostly, professionals working in Catholic hospitals in Australia - in the University's Graduate Certificate in Leadership and Catholic Culture. Matthews and Tobin were again involved in the educational activities of the Clinical School at St Vincent's Hospital, Matthews by supervising the Independent Learning Project of medical students and Tobin by giving occasional lectures in bioethics to medical students in the Clinical School.

Our Annual Plunkett Lecture was given by Matthews who is our Senior Research Fellow. He addressed the subject: Musical memories and the way we were: musical therapy in the care of people with progressive cognitive impairment. He showed how much more can be achieved by musical therapy than by conventional cognitive therapies. Matthews is a valuable member of staff of the Centre: his research, publications, public speaking and consultation work all focus on questions of moral identity and moral agency, philosophical questions which are called into question in the treatment and care of people with mental illness and addiction.

Late in the year we farewelled Mr Mark Hales, a long term member of the Management Committee of the Centre. Over the years, Mark worked assiduously to ensure that the hospital made best use of the resources of the Plunkett Centre and that the staff of the Centre were responsive to the needs of the Hospital. He will be greatly missed.

Research

The Plunkett Centre conducts research in the following areas:

- Contemporary normative theory, in particular virtue theory, and its relation to Kant's ethics and consequentialism.
- Clinical ethics, in particular the goals of medicine, the canons of therapeutic responsiveness; competence, consent and decision-making about sick children; end-of-life decision-making; advance care planning; assisted reproductive technologies; organ and tissue donation; professional role ethics, the law and clinical ethics; regenerative medicine; public health ethics.
- Psychiatric ethics, in particular the threat of psychopathology to moral identity and moral agency, respect for autonomy, competence and coercion, moral responsibility of impaired persons, law and psychiatry, and the ethical challenges posed by developments in neuroscience in this area.
- Bioethics, in particular the Catholic Christian contribution and its debates with and relationships to contemporary secular bioethics; the Metaphysics of the Incarnation; Human Sexuality and Procreation; the history of parental involvement at the end of life; word and ideas employed in end of life discussions; the meaning of suffering in the Intensive Care Unit; the history of organ donation; Issues around dead bodies.
- Research Ethics, in particular traditional debates about ethical standards with respect to research involving human participants and research involving animals; contemporary debates about genetic technologies, biotechnologies, stem cells, biobanking, etc.
- Resource allocation, in particular debates about the roles of the individual, the family, the market and the state in the provision of health care.
- Computer ethics (in medical contexts), in particular the role online therapies play in treatment, reduction in costs, effectiveness, threats it poses to the clinician-patient relationship.

Research Supervision

Alcohol and drug dependence causes death and disability, and are responsible for immense health, economic, and social costs. Much of this could be prevented or mitigated.

The so-called medical model of addiction views it as a chronic, relapsing brain disease, even though the practices of those who take drugs are often voluntary (despite the negative consequences). Addiction thus links to some key questions in moral psychology concerning addicts' self conceptions and moral character, their capacity for self-control, and their freedom and responsibility.

This research was aimed at clarifying models of addiction by distinguishing two sub groups of addicts by the severity of the negative consequences they face. Under the supervision of Dr Steve Matthews, the research was carried out by Mr Pradeep Widana-Pathiranal, a Phase 2 medical student at the University of New South Wales, as his Independent Learning Project at the Clinical School of St Vincent's Hospital.

2013 Annual Plunkett Lecture

In 2013, the Annual Plunkett Lecture was given by Dr Steve Matthews on the subject Musical Memories and the Way We Were: The Role of Musical Therapy in Progressive Cognitive Impairment.

Dr Matthews is Senior Research Fellow at the Plunkett Centre and Senior Lecturer in Philosophy in the School of Philosophy at Australian Catholic University. The video and text of his lecture can be accessed at:www.plunkettcentre.acu.edu.au
