Career summary

I have a PhD from Deakin University (awarded in 1999). I am a Registered Psychologist with the Australian Health Practitioner Registration Agency (PSY0001121396), and a member of the Australian Psychological Society. I supplemented my formal training in psychology with studies in sociological aspects of history. My current research interests cross the discipline boundaries of psychology, criminology, sociology, social work, and public health.

I was a senior manager in the Commonwealth public service for more than 12 years at the Australian Institute of Family Studies (AIFS) in a variety of roles. From August 2004, I was manager of the National Child Protection Clearinghouse; then from October 2005, I also had responsibility as General Manager for a range of research projects and knowledge translation and exchange services to inform policy and practice across a spectrum of child/family welfare areas, as well as leadership and strategic management responsibilities across the Institute. From March 2011 to February 2017, I was Deputy Director (Research), with responsibility for AIFS' research projects and research communication outputs across a broad range of topic areas relating to families including family relationships, social and economic participation, and child and family wellbeing.

In 2017 I was appointed Professor and Director of the Institute of Child Protection Studies (ICPS) at the Australian Catholic University (ACU). ICPS enhances outcomes for children, young people, and families through quality research, program evaluation, training and community education, advocacy, and policy development. We are recognised nationally for our expertise in child protection, preventing and responding to the abuse and neglect of children, and addressing vulnerability. We promote children's participation, strengthen service systems, inform practice, and support child-safe communities.

Research—to understand, and improve the circumstances of vulnerable children, young people, and their families—has been my passion for 30 years. As an academic in psychology, then a senior manager and deputy director at AIFS, and now as director of a research institute at ACU, I have contributed to over 340 publications (including more than 100 peer-reviewed publications and journal articles), and over 600 presentations and media engagements. I have led innovative knowledge translation/exchange functions that have increased access to the evidence-base for policy makers and practitioners working to protect children and promote family and community wellbeing.

Career highlights

Evidence of impact

I have been researching child maltreatment—its characteristics, causes, consequences, and community responses—for 30 years. I pioneered the concept of ‘multi-type maltreatment’, demonstrating empirically the frequency with which children are exposed to more than one type of harm (sexual, physical, and psychological abuse, neglect, exposure to domestic or family violence), and that poorer psychological outcomes are associated with experiencing a greater range and severity of maltreatment types. This has led to new conceptual developments and policy implications for statutory child protection services – including the recognition that regardless of maltreatment type, harms can accumulate, and vulnerable children need appropriate responses based not just on discrete single incidents.

My work has expanded since then to look at comparisons of statutory child protection systems across Australia, the intersections (and gaps) with the family law system – including his highly praised evaluation of the Family Court of Australia’s Magellan case-management system for responding to allegations of sexual abuse or serious physical abuse by separating parents. My work has since branched out to look at other aspects of vulnerable families – including an ethnographic study of disadvantaged communities, the impact of the Northern Territory Emergency Response on safety in Indigenous communities, caring for family members with disability, child-safe organisations, and community safety in Indigenous communities.

I have contributed significantly to two significant research projects on out-of-home care commissioned by state governments: in NSW (all new entrants into care) and Victoria (transitioning from care). I have led innovations in knowledge translation and exchange to support policy makers and practitioners to access and engage with research ideas in relation to child protection, child and family wellbeing, and closing the gap on Indigenous disadvantage. I have also led a team of researchers on a national study of the effects of past adoption practices, and a follow-up study of the current needs of those affected. I have presented to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child in Geneva (February 2019) as part of the alternative report from Australia’s coalition of non-government organisations – the Australian Child Rights Taskforce.

My academic expertise in psychology, social work, and public health that has influenced policy and service delivery in areas relating to family policy in Australia such as social policy and laws that intersect with child and family issues; caring for family members with disability, autism and impacts on family wellbeing; historical perspectives and current views; disability and child safety; child-safe organisations and prevention of child sexual abuse; trauma from past practices, public health approach to safe family environments; and service provision responses to better meet client need (forced adoption and child removal practices). Further details on key areas of policy and service delivery where my research focus has had an impact are provided below.

Multi-type maltreatment – the overlap between different forms of abuse/neglect:

I pioneered the concept of ‘multi-type maltreatment’, developed a measurement tool (adult retrospective self-report, and parent-report versions) to demonstrate empirically the frequency with which children are exposed to more than one type of harm (sexual, physical and psychological abuse, neglect, exposure to family violence), and that poorer psychological outcomes are associated with experiencing a greater range and severity of maltreatment types. For example:

Child protection systems:

As well as undertaking comparisons of statutory child protection systems across Australia, I have looked at conceptual challenges in service provision for children at risk of harm from child maltreatment, and the key elements of a public health approach to child safety, e.g.:

Family law and child protection:

I extended my focus on statutory child protection systems across Australia to include analysis of the intersections (and gaps) with the family law system – including his highly praised evaluation of the Family Court of Australia’s Magellan case-management system for responding to allegations of sexual abuse or serious physical abuse by separating parents. For example:

Child-safe organisations and prevention of child sexual abuse:

I have given presentations to welfare peak bodies, Indigenous welfare agencies, and sports bodies regarding organisational risks and child-safe approaches. I have made submissions on behalf of AIFS and ICPS, and I am a member of a Reference Group for the Australian Psychological Society where I contribute to the development of the Society's policies and frameworks for responding to the issues raised by the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse and making submissions to the Commission and giving evidence at their hearings. Forced adoption/family-separation practices:

In the decades prior to the mid-1970s, it was common in Australia for babies of unwed mothers to be adopted. The adoption practices at the time had the potential for lifelong consequences for the lives of these affected. I led a major national study of the impacts, a scoping study of service responses that was subsequently implemented by the Commonwealth Government. I have given evidence before government enquiries conducted by Victorian and Australian Governments, and Canada. I also have presentations and webinars on my areas of expertise as part of dissemination strategies funded by the Commonwealth Government Department of Health. For example:

Contemporary family policy:

I have explored some of the complexities that confront both those who frame social policy and those involved in the legal systems that intersect with child and family issues. I have analysed both historical perspectives and current views, identifying challenges for future directions in policy and law relating to the protection and wellbeing of children and their families in Australia. For example:

Doyle, F. L., Morawska, A., Higgins, D. J., Havighurst, S. S., Mazzucchelli, T. G., Toumbourou, J. W., Middeldorp, C. M., Chainey, C., Cobham, V. E., Harnett, H., & Sanders, M. R. (2022). Indigenous child, family, and community safety:

I am experienced in qualitative research and managing program evaluations in partnership with Indigenous communities, on topics such as: out-of-home care, early childhood, and education engagement/mentoring for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people. I was instrumental in establishing the Closing the Gap Clearinghouse, focused on identifying and communicating key findings from research evidence about what works to close the gap on Indigenous disadvantage. For example:

Disability, diversity, family wellbeing and safety:

My expertise in family functioning, relationships, and wellbeing has included a focus on sexual health and safety, caring for family members with disability, autism and family wellbeing, sexual orientation, marriage, homophobia, and prevention approaches to stigma, discrimination, and exclusion. Experience

13 February 2017 –

Professor & Director, Institute of Child Protection Studies

Australian Catholic University (Melbourne Campus)

Responsible for the operation of the Institute, including all research, programs and budgets within the Institute, reporting to the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Coordination).

3-20 June 2012; 2-14 Jan 2013; 23 Dec 2013–17 Jan 2014; 23 Dec 2014–16 Jan 2015; 14-26 June 2016; 5-16 December 2016.

Acting Director, Australian Institute of Family Studies

August 2015 –

Associate Professor, University of Melbourne (Faculty of Medicine, Dentistry and Health Sciences)

Adjunct (Honorary) appointment.

3 March 2011 – 13 February 2017

Deputy Director (Research), Australian Institute of Family Studies

Responsible for all research programs and budgets within the Institute, reporting to the Director. Member of the Australian Public Service's Senior Executive Service, and responsible with fellow members of the Executive for the overall management, financial viability, and governance of the Institute. Manage staff responsible for around 50 different projects, totaling around $8M annually. Most projects specifically commissioned or the result of competitive tender. Responsible for reviewing the methodological quality, ethical review and conduct of all projects. Responsible for quality assurance on all research outputs.

October 2005 – December 2010

General Manager (Research), Australian Institute of Family Studies

Manage interdisciplinary teams of over 20 staff to deliver a broad range of research and knowledge-transfer services for policy makers in government departments and community agencies.

Aug 2006 – 2012

Honorary Research Fellow, Faculty of Health, Medicine, Nursing and Behavioural Sciences, Deakin University

Chaired Academic Advisory Board, School of Psychology. Provided strategic advice to Head of School or nominee as needed. Supervised doctoral student theses. Conducted interactive seminars/case-practice classes for clinical doctoral students.

Aug 2004 – Nov 2006

Manager, National Child Protection Clearinghouse, AIFS

Managed team of research and communication staff delivering knowledge translation and exchange services to meet the needs of over 7,000 subscribers: policymakers (in government and community service organisations), practitioners, and researchers relating to safety and protection of children from abuse and neglect. Web publications are heavily downloaded; cited in peer-review publications, Inquiries, state/territory and national frameworks and policy papers. (From Oct 2005 – Nov 2006, I was also General Manager (Research) at AIFS.)

Jan 2004 – Aug 2004

Senior Lecturer, School of Psychology, Deakin University

Feb 1998 – Dec 2003

Lecturer, School of Psychology, Deakin University

Managed teams of lecturers, tutors, and research staff. Coordinated 1st year psychology program across four campuses, including distance education. Developed new teaching modules and units and wrote/edited new course materials. Supervised professional placement programs in government and commercial agencies for Industrial and Organisational Psychology Masters students. Elected to University's Academic Board (the most senior representative body).

1996-97

Consultant to VicHealth

Evaluated school-based child sexual abuse prevention program piloted by the Australian Childhood Foundation (collected and analysed data and drafted final evaluation report).

1995-97

Casual Academic, Deakin University

Developed and delivered lectures and tutorials in Deakin University's School of Psychology. Tutored, mentored, and supported Indigenous education students studying through Deakin University's Institute of Koorie Education.

1995-96

Probationary Psychologist, Private Practice

Delivered assessment and therapeutic services to individuals, couples, and families.

1994-96

Research Assistant, School of Psychology, Deakin University

Coordinated data collection, coding, entry, cleaning, and analysis for range of research projects, and contributed to draft reports and journal articles.

Income generation

As Director of the ACU Institute of Child Protection Studies – and in my previous role of Deputy Director (Research), AIFS, generating income for the range of research, as a significant proportion of operating revenue is derived from competitive grants, tenders, quotes, and commissioned work, I am responsible for the quality of submissions, overall management of budgets, risks, and quality of deliverables.

Category 1 Grants since 2017:

The first national study of child abuse and neglect in Australia: prevalence, health outcomes, and burden of disease. Australian Government National Health and Medical Research Council, Project Grant (APP1158750), 2019-2023. Funded amount: $2,311,217. Chief Investigators: Professor Ben Mathews (QUT), Dr Rosana Pacella (University of Chichester), Professor Michael Dunne (QUT), Associate Professor James Scott (UQ), Professor David Finkelhor (University of New Hampshire), Professor Franziska Meinck (University of Oxford), Professor Daryl Higgins (Australian Catholic University), Dr Holly Erskine (UQ), Dr Hannah Thomas (Queensland Centre for Mental Health Research), & Prof David Lawrence (Curtin University).

Additional funding has also been secured from the Australian Government's National Office for Child Safety (Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet) and the Department of Social Services: $310,000. <https://www.australianchildmaltreatmentstudy.org/>

Fostering school attendance for students in Out-of-Home Care. Australian Research Council Linkage Project (LP220100130). Professor Katarina Te Riele; Mr Dale Murray; Dr Thomas Brunzell; Professor Sharon Bessell; Professor Anna Sullivan; Professor Daryl Higgins; Dr Michael Guerzoni; Mr Jesse King; Dr Rhonda Coopes; Dr Joseph McDowall. This project aims to investigate why children and young people in Out-Of-Home Care in Australia are absent from school far more than their peers. The project expects to generate new knowledge about the reasons for their absences and to develop solutions to improve attendance through: children's own voices; detailed absence data; policy audit; and case studies of promising practice. Expected outcomes include a comprehensive conceptualisation of absences including those triggered by schools or the care context; and an evidence-informed, child-centred framework to enable attendance and, thereby, improved educational outcomes. This should provide significant social and economic benefits both for children in care and for the community. Awarded 07/02/2023. $458,348.00

Major projects

From 2011-2017, I was the Project Executive Director of the Growing up in Australia team at AIFS, responsible for the design and content of the longitudinal study of 10,000 Australian children, and preparation of research and statistical reports. I also had overall responsibility for major evaluation projects, research, and longitudinal studies looking at a variety of issues including: humanitarian migrants (Building a New Life in Australia), entering care (Pathways of Care), leaving care (Beyond 18), parental separation (Family Pathways) and an ongoing longitudinal study that has followed the development of a large group of Victorian children from infancy to adulthood, and now follows their children (Australian Temperament Project): www.aifs.gov.au.
